The attendance for the week was about the same as during the fall term, several new scholars having entered school to take the places of those who have dropped out. All the teachers were in their rooms this week, with the exception of Miss Ruth Hovey, who was detained at her home in Canada because of her mother's illness.

The Gingerbread Man.

James Pennington Lee, principal comedian in the musical extravaganza, "The Gingerbread Man," in which Myron B. Rice and Joseph Weaver will present at the Barre opera house next Wednesday evening is a great practical joker, and some of his merry pranks have almost led to serious results. A number of seasons since Lee was managing a little comedy company of which he was part owner, business was very bad. They were playing the little town of Bufile, Ind. Ter. After the first act Lee asked the local manager for his "rough" statement. The manager did not know what he meant. He said he had been manager of the Bufile Grand opera house for 12 years and he had never been asked for a statement before, and launched into a long lament about the woes of the country manager. Lee thought the old fellow good prey for one of his practical jokes. So after they had ascertained that there was $42.00 in the house, Lee with a very mysterious air, invited the old fellow to go into the cellar with him. He asked in a whisper, "are we alone?" When the manager assured him that they were, Lee asked, "Are you brave?" and when the manager allowed that he was Lee continued, "Business is bad, I am discouraged and desperate and you say you are discouraged too. I have a conspiracy to propose to you. It is this: You set fire to the theatre and I'll shoot the actors." This is as far as Lee got with his criminal proposition for the old fellow bolted from the cellar and told the police harrowing tales about his encounter with a desperado. He could not be induced to go near the theatre until Lee had left town.

There will be a special commutation of Graniteville, No. 35, P. & A. M., this evening at 7 o'clock. Work, F. C. degree. Per order W. M.

"The Gingerbread Man," Frederick Ranken and A. Baldwin Sloane's fanciful fairytale, graphically acted by Myron B. Rice and Joseph Weaver's capable and carefully chosen company of fifty-five players, will be the attraction at the opera house next Wednesday evening, January 16. This monarch of musical comedies is very different from any other entertainment now before the public, attracting by its novelty, its wholesomeness, its unassuming fun, and the tenderness of its moving love story books of our childhood. The production from a scenic standpoint is the most elaborate one that has ever been seen in a musical comedy and it will be presented here exactly as it was during the phenomenal success of its moving love story books of our childhood. BOBBY ON THE HUMAN BODY.

A Juvenile Essay Containing Some Hitherto Unpublished Information.

The human body was first supposed to be made up of 208 bones, but later discoveries have developed the fact that it contains 206 bones and an appendix. An appendix is something which is added on, like a postscript on a woman's letter, and means about as much. Its principal use is to afford a revenue for doctors and surgery specialists. Operations on the human system are the correct thing in polite society. Pa says there is one woman in our town who has nothing left in her but her palate and her tongue, she has been operated on so much. Last Sunday our Sunday school text was, "Praise the Lord, oh, my soul, and all that is within me." I said to pa, "Mrs. So-and-so wouldn't be very strong on that, would she?" And he laughed and said no.

A railroad brakeman is in a class by himself. He doesn't have anywhere near 208 bones in his body. I know a brakeman, chairman of a grievance committee of ten, and when he goes to count the members of the committee on his fingers he can never get a quorum because he hasn't enough fingers left.

It says in my physiology that in the human frame is a network of nerves, a sort of system of fine wires which carry messages to and from the brain. For instance, if you put your finger on a hot stove the nerves of the arm carry a message to your brain that your finger is getting burned, and your brain flashes back instructions to take your finger off the stove. The other night I had my fingers in a can of jam in the pantry when by accident sent a message to my brain that ma was coming. My brain answered back to take my fingers out, but the message was delayed in transmission, and I didn't move quick enough. Ma caught me. For a few minutes the wires running up my spine to my brain were crowded with good government messages as to what was going on to the dining line. Now when I go to sit down my brain advises my arms to put a pillow on the chair.—Bobby in Judge.

On the Job.

When the thermometer dropped below zero Mrs. Rodgers was much disturbed by the thought that Huldah, the new kitchen maid, slept in an unheated room.

"Huldah," she said, remembering the good old custom of her girlhood, "it's going to be pretty cold tonight. I think you had better take a flannel to bed with you."

"Yes, ma'am," assented Huldah without enthusiasm.

Mrs. Rogers, happy in the belief that her maid was comfortable, slept soundly. In the morning she visited the kitchen.

"Well, Huldah, how did you get along with the flannel?"

Huldah breathed a deep sigh of recollection.

"Well, ma'am, I got it most warm before morning."—Everybody's.

are bringing fancy prices. Early spring pullets should be "cackling" these warm days. If they are not, why not? Experienced poultrymen say theirs are. The reason that theirs are producing eggs is that they are giving their hens plenty of "Page's Poultry Food," also ground green "Alfalfa," Meat Meal, Mica Crystal Grit, Cracked Bone, Oyster Shells, Sunflower Seed, etc., all of which we carry in full stock, at the lowest prices for the best grades. Also have in stock "Weare's Poultry Powder," "Empire Egg Food," "Columbian Condition Powder," "Lord's Prolific Poultry Powder, etc."
